The Loop at Mattapan Station and Daily Table grocery store now open

May 05, 2023 - Owners Developers & Managers

Boston, MA Mayor Michelle Wu, lieutenant governor Kim Driscoll, Preservation of Affordable Housing (POAH), Nuestra Comunidad Development Corp., MassHousing, residents and funders celebrated the grand opening of The Loop at Mattapan Station. The Loop is a new transit-oriented, 135-unit affordable mixed-use housing community in Mattapan Sq. The celebration included a ribbon cutting for the housing and for Daily Table, a community grocery store on the ground floor of the building with a mission to provide nutritious, delicious food below market-rate prices. The Loop at Mattapan Station was developed on a vacant and underutilized MBTA parking lot adjacent to the Mattapan trolley line station.

The income-restricted units and 10,000 s/f of first-floor retail space were built using the latest passive house energy efficiency standards. The Loop helps to push forward mayor Wu's agenda to create more transit-oriented developments. The Loop is located next to an MBTA bus stop, the Mattapan Trolley stop and is a block from the Commuter Rail Station in Mattapan Sq. It's affordable to a range of incomes, with almost half of the apartments available to individuals at 50% AMI (area median income) and below. The Loop also offers amenities such as a gym, community rooms, roof deck, bike room, E-bike station and wifi/broadband access to all its residents.

The first commercial tenant, Daily Table, is a non-profit grocery chain dedicated to providing fresh and nutritious food to communities most in need at prices everyone can afford. By partnering with a network of growers, manufacturers, and other suppliers, Daily Table is able to source high-quality food at low costs.

The Loop at Mattapan Station was made possible in part by $3 million from the city of Boston's Mayor's Office of Housing, $39.3 million in tax credit equity from an allocation of Low-Income Housing Tax Credits (LIHTC), allocated by the Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD). DHCD also provided $5.35 million in direct support for the project. The project also benefited from $1.8 million in public infrastructure funding from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and $540,000 in passive house funding from the Massachusetts Clean Energy Center. Bank of America provided construction financing and is the tax credit equity investor.

"The Loop at Mattapan Station is a model for the mission-driven work of creating affordable housing for working families and building stronger Boston neighborhoods," said mayor Wu.

"Together with all of our partners, we have transformed this underutilized parking lot into a mixed-use, mixed-income, transit-oriented development with 135 beautiful new rental homes that will connect residents to economic opportunity for many years to come."

"We are eager to champion more projects like The Loop at Mattapan Station across Massachusetts, where public-private partnerships leverage state, federal, and local resources and produce transformative results on state-owned, underutilized sites," said Lt. governor Driscoll. "There are opportunities in every region, and we are ready to invest. Our state has the tools with MassWorks, affordable housing tax credits, housing vouchers, planning grants, environmental remediation, and many more resources to jumpstart development. Congratulations to the MBTA, POAH, Nuestra Comunidad and the many other partners in making this project a reality."

“We are thrilled to welcome low and moderate income households to The Loop at Mattapan Station,” said Aaron Gornstein, president and CEO of POAH. “These residents will also benefit from energy efficient apartments, recreational opportunities, public transit, and a new grocery store. We greatly appreciate the support of all our partners, funders and neighborhood residents who helped make this happen.”

“The Loop’s housing provides a crucial link between housing, transit, and economic opportunity. The building’s passive house energy efficiency standards, along with its amenities make it a model for sustainable and inclusive development. I look forward to the positive impact that The Loop will have on the community,” said Sheila Dillon, chief of housing.

“We are thrilled to have opened our fourth location here in Mattapan, where we will continue to deliver on our mission to provide freshly prepared meals, a broad selection of fresh fruits, veggies, meats and seafood, and grocery staples all at prices that are truly affordable for any budget and SNAP eligible,” said Doug Rauch, Daily Table founder, and president.

“The Loop at Mattapan Station exemplifies the mission-driven work of MassHousing and all of our partners in creating affordable housing for working families and building stronger communities,” said MassHousing executive director, Chrystal Kornegay. “We are pleased to join POAH, the Commonwealth, and the City of Boston in celebrating the new rental homes that will connect residents to economic opportunity for many years to come.”

“Nuestra Comunidad is excited and proud to witness the fruits of our years-long labor and partnership with POAH,” said N. Paul TonThat, Nuestra Comunidad’s executive director. “Nuestra is confident that The Loop will significantly benefit the greater Mattapan community by providing transit oriented affordable housing opportunities and neighborhood centric retail.”

MassHousing also provided $36.5 million in affordable housing financing for the Loop, including $17.4 million in permanent financing, $16.1 million in tax-exempt bridge financing, and $3 million from the Agency’s Workforce Housing Initiative.
