

nerej

2023 Women in CRE: Michelle Latino, Callahan Construction

September 29, 2023 - Spotlights

Michelle Latino
Assistant Project Manager

What recent project, transaction, or accomplishment are you most proud of? I am finishing up a multifamily project in Boston called 5 Washington, a 108-unit residential mixed-use project with amenities, and it was the first time I did not work on a project from the very start. It was challenging to come in at the eleventh hour but I am proud of being able to jump right in and to be there for support as we wrapped up our work.

Who inspires you most? What qualities do they possess that inspire you? I've always looked externally for inspiration, but as I get older, I realize we need to look inside for inspiration. I work hard to inspire myself on a daily basis. This has changed my way of life and gives me something to work towards every day.

Why should this nominee be recognized in our Women in Commercial Real Estate Spotlight?

"Michelle consistently goes the extra mile to make sure that her work is completed in a timely manner. She is willing to help team members, and she has been a go to resource for on-boarding new hires. She is a regular participant in networking and charity functions representing Callahan, too." - Taylor Willis, Senior Marketing Associate at Callahan Construction.

What are the most important factors women in your industry should consider when choosing a firm to build their career with? Representation is important. When I interviewed at Callahan four years ago, I asked if there were any women in senior positions before accepting the job. Respect in general is key, and as long as you work for a company who respects everyone, you will never have a problem.