April 05, 2024 - Owners Developers & Managers

Wellfleet, MA Studio G Architects, a Boston-based architecture firm known for its commitment to sustainability and community enhancement, has been selected as the architect for the Maurice's Campground planning project. The project aims to create a plan for the transformation of the 21-acre campground into a community with a mix of homes at varying levels of affordability, as well as non-residential uses, through a community engagement process.

Studio G Architects will spearhead the master planning service for the expansive property recently acquired by the Town of Wellfleet. The redevelopment effort is poised to offer a diverse range of housing options, including affordable rentals, year-round home ownership, and seasonal workforce housing, catering to the varied needs of the community. Studio G is working collaboratively on this endeavor with community planner JM Goldsen, civil engineer and landscape architect Langan Engineering and Environmental Services, Inc., and financial/development consultant Boston Communities.

"We are deeply honored to have been chosen by the Town of Wellfleet for this transformative project," said Gail Sullivan, managing principal of Studio G Architects. "Our team is committed to a robust community engagement process to create a master plan that addresses the pressing housing needs of the Lower Cape and also enhances the overall livability and sustainability of the area."

The project will prioritize addressing housing needs across different demographics and income levels, maximizing housing opportunities while maintaining the character of town. Studio G aims to achieve this by incorporating smart growth principles for sustainable development, minimizing environmental impact, and promoting renewable energy solutions. Additionally, the project aims to support residents' recreational and vocational needs, ensuring a well-rounded and inclusive community environment.

"Studio G Architects brings a unique blend of creativity and vision to each project," said Gabriela Shelburne, senior project manager at Studio G Architects. "We are dedicated to crafting a master plan for Maurice's Campground that meets the needs of many households and is deeply rooted in the culture and landscape of Wellfleet."

Studio G Architects is collaborating with the Preservation of Affordable Housing (POAH) and Community Development Partnership (CDP) at the Residences at Lawrence Hill project in Wellfleet, scheduled to commence construction this summer.
