Columbia appoints Gallant chief operating officer

April 19, 2024 - Construction Design & Engineering

Shawn Gallant

North Reading, MA Columbia has appointed Shawn Gallant to the newly established chief operating officer role. Gallant, a 23 year veteran of the firm, most recently served as senior vice president.

“At Columbia, we are dedicated to creating a consistent best-in-class experience, both internally and externally for all our clients. This approach embodies the Columbia Way, which Shawn Gallant has embraced, championed, and lived throughout his career here,” said Columbia president Shaun Lover. “The chief operating officer is tasked with ensuring that we continue to provide a consistent approach and experience. Shawn is the perfect person to fulfill this role.”

Gallant has worked in a variety of roles at Columbia since joining the company in 2001, when he was hired as a project manager. He later served as a leader on the science + technology team and as vice president of the interiors group before assuming a company-wide senior vice president role with a focus on operations.

Gallant has worked on projects for Cell Signaling Technology, The Chiofaro Company, Microsoft, Raytheon, Siemens Healthineers, Sonos, and Wayfair to name a few.

“Columbia is a company with a deeply supportive culture which pushes to continuously improve while providing opportunities to support personal and professional growth,” said Gallant. “I’m excited to serve as Chief Operating Officer, and to support our continued successes as individuals, as a team, and as one of Massachusetts’ leading construction management firms.”
