In the last 12 months what accomplishment are you most proud of? In the past year, I achieved a significant milestone by being promoted to counsel within the firm. This accomplishment was particularly meaningful as it represented a vote of confidence from my colleagues, acknowledging my dedication, expertise, and contributions to the team. It has fueled my determination to continue growing professionally, taking on new challenges, and making a positive impact within the firm and the broader legal community.

How do you balance your rising career with your personal life? Balancing my growing career and personal life has been achievable because of the teamwork and support from my loving husband and family. Their unwavering encouragement frees me to dedicate significant time and energy to my professional endeavors. Additionally, effective time management and organizational skills play a big role in ensuring that I can fulfill both my work commitments and personal responsibilities without compromising on either front.
