Grove Realty Partners transforms vacant lot into Topsfield Station

November 25, 2008 - Retail

A formerly vacant lot owned by the MBTA has been transformed into a brand new, retail shop known as Topsfield Station. The project developer was Grove Realty Partners, which had help in the form of a commercial real estate loan from Danversbank.

Brian Woodland approached the well-known community bank with his vision for how the unused parcel of land could be revitalized. Ron Gannett, vice president of commercial lending at Danversbank, quickly saw the value of the project.

What Woodland envisioned was a complete overhaul of the property; a retail development that would favor families and honor the bike trail/rail bed theme of the area. Danversbank was thrilled to get involved and help him make it a reality. The building that stands there today is a testament to his creativity, and it demonstrates that investments in our communities are still being made. It's easy to forget that, given all of the negative economic news coverage of late.

Topsfield Station, located at 7 Grove St., was completed over the summer and was fully leased before construction was finished. The second floor houses an insurance company and other office tenants, while the first boasts Station Sweet Shoppe and Topsfield Bike Shop.

"We were lucky to have Danversbank for a partner in this," Woodland said. "They have very extensive experience and I found Ron to be friendly, knowledgeable and easy to work with. I am confident that my project is better off and a nicer finished product by having done business with them."
