Hooper becomes newest employee-owner of Warrenstreet Architects

February 04, 2009 - Northern New England

On January 1 Todd Hooper, a three year veteran and intern architect with Warrenstreet Architects, became an owner joining five other employee-owners of the design cooperative.

Hooper is involved in many of Warrenstreet's projects, serving in both leadership and support roles. He brings an energy and enthusiasm to each of his assignments. He is presently working on Town and Country Nursing Home in Lowell and a new medical building for Concord Hospital in Epsom. Hooper is pursuing his architectural license and LEED Certification.

Warrenstreet Architects is an employee-owned design cooperative. They provide planning, land planning, architecture and interior design to a variety of clients throughout New England.
