Traditional Building Exhibition and Conference to be held at the Hynes Convention Center on March 12-14

February 18, 2009 - Construction Design & Engineering

If you are a building owner, architect, designer, contractor, developer, craftsman, facilities manager, engineer or preservationist working in the $170 billion traditional building market, you will want to attend the Traditional Building Exhibition and Conference at the Hynes Convention Center on March 12-14.

Earn 24 Continuing Education credits at this trade event dedicated to historic restoration and renovation and traditionally-inspired new construction. This year's theme: Smart Solutions for a Challenging Market will address how traditional building skills and products can help you thrive in turbulent times. How you can turn historic tax credits into cash financing and how applying modern technology to historic buildings can be profitable, sustainable and responsible.

Talk with experts in workshops and seminars about:

- * Sustainability and green building practices
- * Restoration and rehabilitation
- * Residential design
- * Traditional trades
- * Preservation in practice

See live demonstrations of traditional trades in window restoration; plaster repair; ornamental ironwork and more. Watch architects design and draw vernacular houses as they compete in the Traditional Building Design Challenge. Visit with over 100 exhibitors who make and restore authentic, historically accurate products for traditional building, restoration and renovation.
