Acella completes 4,500 s/f renovation project at Northeastern Univ.

February 18, 2009 - Construction Design & Engineering

Acella Construction Corp. recently completed a 4,500 s/f renovation of the Education Technology Center at the Snell Library at Northeastern University.

"This is one of many projects we have recently completed at Northeastern University," said Saul Schrader, project manager at Acella.

The renovated space includes a new wall configuration that created individual offices for the staff. The new space, which features a dirt wall system throughout, also has a kitchenette, training lab, resource library, digital media suite, and recording studio. The space will be used to train staff on how to utilize technology for teaching.

In addition to the renovation of Education Technology Center, Acella Const. recently completed its 7th laboratory renovation at Northeastern in the last 12 months.
