Cubellis featured in the "Top Commercial Construction Architects" in Commercial Construction magazine

March 18, 2009 - Construction Design & Engineering

Cubellis, an international architecture, interior design and engineering firm, has been featured in the first-annual listing of the "Top Commercial Construction Architects" in the January/February issue of Commercial Construction Magazine.

This report offers information on firms doing work in the major market segments, including retail, hospitality and restaurants, with a break-out of areas of specialization. Cubellis ranks in the top 20 firms according to billings and projects, as well as the top 10 firms regarding billings in retail, restaurants and hospitality.

"Our ranking in this publication affirms our business model of a practice group based organization, enabling our teams to service our clients in these major market segments," said James Kimball, AIA, principal, retail business unit leader at Cubellis. "Our mission at Cubellis is to make our clients more successful through our international presence and local knowledge."
