ASM moves into new offices at One Washington Mall

May 13, 2009 - Construction Design & Engineering

In nearly 60 years as an association, ASM has never had its own office (instead being hosted by the law office of Corwin & Corwin, counsel to the association). That has changed this spring, however, as construction crews from ASM member companies turned vacant space next to the law firm into a dedicated new office suite for ASM. The project came together quickly and without a hitch, thanks to the professionalism of ASM members. As this ASM sponsored page goes to press, we will be moving into the new office, and interviewing for a new staff person who will now have space to work. Visit ASM's website to see a complete photo gallery of the project, in progress.
